African Wildlife and Livelihoods: The Promise and Performance of Community Conservation
Marshall W. Murphree
Recent conservation policies in Africa have followed three main principles: 1) that conservation should be community-based; 2) that things conserved should be managed to achieve both development and conservation goals; 3) that markets should play a role in shaping the incentives for conservation. The editors and contributors of this volume examine the success or otherwise of these practices in a number of different contexts across the continent. North America: Heinemann; Uganda: Fountain Publishers; Kenya: EAEP; Zimbabwe: Weaver Press
