Grief Alchemy: A Story of Hospice Marion Wilson Gruzalski
This is the true story of a woman whose life was transformed by grief over the loss of three of her children. The overwhelming power of her grief pushed her to the depths of despair and thoughts of suicide. Within this inner darkness she caught a glimpse of a place that was perfectly peaceful. This glimpse transformed her life and changed her view of the world. It set her on a spiritual journey that led her to found one of the first full-service Medicare Certified hospices in the United States at the Texas Medical Center in Houston. This is a unique story of someone who, with complete trust in her visions, her dreams, her inner voice, and the power of love, committed herself to help those who are dying and their loved ones. Marion became an inspiration to others who witnessed her vision and commitment becoming a “brick and mortar” reality. Her story is especially uplifting for those involved in hospice and for those experiencing loss. It is sad, funny, surprising, and would be a good read for anyone who would like some inspiration.
